

From Nursing Student to Injured Patient

What Happened

A Georgia nursing student was leaving an appointment when a teen driver pulled out in front of her, causing a violent crash. She suffered a fractured wrist and chest injury.

The Obstacles

At the time, she was working in a hospital externship.

Her injuries forced her to miss several weeks of work and created serious worries about her future in nursing. Without a car – totaled in the crash – she still had to juggle school and medical appointments.

To make matters worse, the at-fault driver's insurance company tried to push a low-ball settlement before the full severity of her injuries was even known.

How We Fought Back

OUR PRIORITY WAS TO EASE THE BURDEN ON OUR CLIENT DURING SUCH A PIVOTAL MOMENT IN HER LIFE.

While the insurance company undervalued her claim, we stood firm. We emphasized not only her physical pain, but also the disruptions to her education, her work, and her well-being. confirmed our client was not at fault.

The Result

We obtained a resolution that honored her struggle, met her expectations, and gave her the peace of mind she needed to continue pursuing her future in nursing.
